

5 Checks for the Best Personal Injury Lawyer in Los Angeles and Eisenberg Law Group PC

Choosing a personal injury lawyer in Los Angeles is a comparison process, not a guess. The right lawyer should explain your options, the court process, and the costs before you sign anything.

How to Choose the Best Personal Injury Lawyer in Los Angeles

The State Bar of California's "Before Selecting an Attorney" recommends contacting two or more candidates and asking about similar cases, who will handle the matter, expected timing, and fees. Be wary of any lawyer who guarantees results; a good lawyer explains strengths and weaknesses.

What to Ask About Fees, Court, and Criminal Defense

In California, personal injury contingency-fee agreements must be in writing, and the client must receive a signed copy under Business and Professions Code section 6147. Ask how costs are handled and whether a lawyer from the law offices will appear in court. A personal injury claim is civil; criminal defense in a Wisconsin district court or the District of Wisconsin is a separate matter with different courts and standards.

Documents and Questions for the First Meeting

- Key facts about the injury and treatment.
- Names and telephone numbers of witnesses and involved parties.
- All papers related to the case, including insurance and medical records.
- Questions about similar cases, billing, and who handles each stage.
