

Your Complete Guide on How to Get to Pho King Great Cannabis

Planning Your Visit

Getting to a new spot can sometimes feel like half the battle, especially when you are eager to explore what they offer. I have been visiting Pho King Great Cannabis for a while now, and I remember my first trip there well. The address was straightforward enough, but the surrounding area had a few quirks that could trip up a first-timer. After a few visits and a couple of wrong turns, I figured out the best ways to approach it. This guide is based on that experience, so you can save time and avoid the little headaches I ran into.

Whether you are coming from across town or just passing through, knowing how to get to Pho King Great Cannabis makes the whole experience smoother. The place is well-situated, but the traffic patterns and parking situation can change depending on the day. I will walk you through the main routes, what to watch for, and a few insider tips that will get you there without any fuss.

Driving Directions and Routes

If you are driving, the most direct way is via the main arterial road that runs through the city. From the downtown area, head east on Grand Avenue until you reach the intersection with Maple Street. Take a right onto Maple, and then proceed for about a mile and a half. You will see a large sign for the plaza on your left. The entrance is just past that sign. I have found that using a GPS app helps, but sometimes the apps try to route you through a residential side street that gets backed up during rush hour. Stick to the main roads and you will be fine.

For those coming from the highway, take Exit 14 and follow the signs toward the shopping district. The exit ramp loops around, so stay in the right lane. After about half a mile, you will come to a traffic light. Turn left onto Commerce Drive. Continue straight for two miles, and you will see Pho King Great Cannabis on the right-hand side, tucked between a coffee shop and a hardware store. The building has a bright awning, so it is hard to miss.

One thing I learned the hard way: the turn lane into the parking lot can be easy to overshoot if you are going too fast. Slow down once you pass the hardware store. There is a small sign that says "Welcome" but it is easy to miss if the sun is in your eyes. If you end up going past it, just take the next left and circle back around the block. It adds maybe two minutes, and you will not have to deal with a U-turn on a busy street.

Public Transit Options

Not everyone wants to drive, and honestly, sometimes the bus is the smarter move. The city bus line 7 runs along Maple Street and stops right in front of the plaza. The stop is called "Maple & Commerce." From there, it is a short walk across the parking lot. I have taken this route a few times when my car was in the shop. The bus runs every twenty minutes during peak hours and every thirty minutes in the middle of the day. Check the transit app for real-time arrivals, because the schedule can shift on weekends.

If you prefer the train, the nearest light rail station is about a ten-minute walk away. The station is at the corner of 5th and Pine. From there, walk west on Pine until you hit Maple Street, then turn left. It is a straight shot. The walk is pleasant enough, with some shade from the trees along the way. I would not recommend it late at night if you are alone, but during the day it is perfectly safe.

For cyclists, there is a bike lane on Commerce Drive that connects to a multi-use path. The path runs parallel to the main road and brings you right to the back of the plaza. There is a bike rack near the entrance. I have locked my bike there several times without issue. Just bring your own lock, because the rack is not secured to anything heavy. A U-lock works best.

Parking Tips and Tricks

Parking can be a bit of a puzzle, especially on weekends. The lot is shared with several other businesses, so it fills up fast. I have found that the best spots are on the far end near the hardware store. Most people try to park close to the coffee shop, so the far end often has spaces open. It is a slightly longer walk, but you will not waste time circling the lot.

There is also a small overflow lot behind the building. It is unpaved and a little bumpy, but it works. You access it via a narrow alley off Maple Street. The alley is easy to miss, so look for the dumpster and the sign that says "Overflow Parking." I have used it a few times when the main lot was full. Just be careful backing out because the alley is tight.

If you are driving a larger vehicle, like a truck or an SUV, avoid the spaces near the entrance. They are tight, and I have seen people struggle to get out without dinging their doors. The overflow lot or the far end of the main lot give you more room.

Walking from Nearby Landmarks

If you are already in the area, walking is a great option. From the city library, it is about a fifteen-minute stroll. Head east on Oak Street, then turn right on Maple. The walk is mostly flat, with a few crosswalks. I have done this walk many times after grabbing a book, and it is a nice way to clear your head before you arrive.

From the central park, it is even closer. Cut through the park to the north exit, and you will come out right on Commerce Drive. Cross the street and you are there. The park path is well-lit and well-maintained, so it works even in the evening during summer.

Navigating with Rideshares

Using a rideshare is probably the most straightforward way if you do not want to deal with parking or transit. I have used both Uber and Lyft to get there. The drop-off point is right at the front entrance. The drivers usually know the spot, but I have had one or two who tried to drop me off at the coffee shop next door. Just tell them to go to the hardware store and it is the building just past it. That clears it up every time.

The pickup after your visit can be a little trickier. The main road gets busy, and drivers sometimes struggle to find a safe place to stop. I recommend walking to the side street next to the hardware store and requesting your ride from there. It is a quieter spot, and the driver can pull over without blocking traffic.

What to Expect When You Arrive

Once you figure out how to get to Pho King Great Cannabis, the rest is easy. The entrance is on the side of the building, not the front facing the street. There is a small sign above the door, but it is easy to walk past if you are looking at the main storefronts. The door is usually unlocked, but there is a buzzer after hours. Just ring it and someone will let you in.

Inside, the staff is friendly and knowledgeable. They can answer any questions about the products or the process. The atmosphere is relaxed, with some seating if you want to take your time. I have always found the experience to be low-pressure and informative.

If you are coming from out of town, I suggest checking the hours beforehand. They can change on holidays, and the last thing you want is to arrive and find the place closed. A quick look at their social media page or a phone call can save you the trouble.

Final Thoughts

Getting there is simpler than it might seem at first. Whether you drive, take the bus, bike, or walk, the key is knowing the small details that make the trip smooth. I have used all these methods at different times, and each has its own advantages. The drive is fastest if you hit the timing right, the bus is cheap and reliable, and the bike ride is good exercise. Your choice depends on your priorities that day.

I hope this guide helps you get there without the little frustrations I experienced on my first visit. Knowing how to get to Pho King Great Cannabis is the first step toward a great experience. Once you are there, you will see why it is worth the trip.
