

Do You Need an Estate Planning national law firm Attorney in Nebraska Yes, if you own a home, have children, run a business, or care who makes decisions for you when you cannot, an estate planning attorney is worth the visit. Nebraska has its own rules on wills, trusts, guardianship, and inheritance tax, and a plan drafted with those rules in mind protects your family in ways a generic online form often cannot. Several of those rules surprise people. In Nebraska, a minor is anyone under 19, not 18, which affects when a child can receive property outright and why many parents name a trustee or custodian to hold assets longer. Nebraska is also one of the few states that still collects an inheritance tax, handled at the county level, with the rate depending on how closely the beneficiary is related to the person who died. Without a durable financial power of attorney and a health care directive, a family may have to ask a court to appoint a guardian or conservator if a parent loses capacity, a process that is public, slower, and harder on everyone than signing documents in advance. An estate planning attorney looks at the whole picture. At Erickson | Sederstrom P.C., L.L.O., the estate planning group drafts wills, revocable trusts used as an alternative to probate, powers of attorney, health care directives, Law Firm and non-probate transfers. The work also covers special needs planning that protects a loved one's Medicaid or SSI eligibility, charitable giving, and business and farm succession plans, a real concern for families with land in Douglas and Sarpy counties or farther out. Shareholders Joseph C. Byam II, Daniel I. Dittman and Andrew J. Huettnner are among the attorneys in this practice. The goals are practical: move as much wealth as possible to the people you choose, keep taxes down where the law allows, and add protection from creditors.

Honestly, very few adults can skip this. A young couple in Benson with a new baby needs guardianship choices on paper. A retired pair in Rockbrook may want a trust so their children avoid probate. A business owner in Miracle Hills needs a plan for who runs the company tomorrow. Even a single person with modest savings benefits from naming someone to handle medical and financial decisions. Plans also need updates after a marriage, divorce, birth, move, or sale of a business, and a firm with multi-generational client relationships is used to revisiting documents as lives change. Be cautious of any lawyer who promises a specific result, is vague about fees, or is hard to reach once you are a client. Charles V. Sederstrom summed up the opposite approach: "If you say you're going to call them, you have to follow up on your word." Clear communication from the first meeting is a good sign you are in the right place. What should I look for in a larger Omaha law firm? Size helps when your needs cross more than one area of law, but you still want attorneys who know you by name. Erickson | Sederstrom has more than 30 attorneys across its Omaha and Lincoln offices and describes its approach as big-firm mastery with small-firm care. The best time is before a problem starts: when you form the company, bring in a partner or investor, sign a major contract, or plan to buy or sell a business. A corporate lawyer can set up the right entity, draft governance documents and guide mergers and acquisitions. Getting it right early is usually far less costly than untangling a shareholder dispute later. Do I need an estate planning attorney in Nebraska? Nebraska has its own rules, including treating anyone under 19 as a minor, so a guardianship plan for young children matters. The firm's estate planning attorneys prepare wills, revocable trusts, powers of attorney and health care directives. How long does probate take in Nebraska? Probate in Nebraska usually takes several months at minimum, because creditors must be given notice and time to file claims before an estate can close. Contested matters or complex assets can stretch that much longer. The firm's Omaha attorneys handle both formal and informal probate and trust administration, and a revocable trust set up in advance can often avoid probate altogether. What does an employment attorney do for employers? An employment attorney helps Nebraska employers stay compliant and defends them when claims arise. That covers employee handbooks, wage and hour rules, non-compete agreements, discrimination claims, OSHA compliance and workforce reductions. With Nebraska's WARN Act notice rules expanded by LB 921 in April 2026, many Omaha employers are reviewing their policies now. What is business litigation?
