Different live painters work in different styles and mediums. Some work in oil or acrylic, others in watercolor or pastel, and others in mixed media or digital formats. Some have a lifelike style, whereas others are more impressionistic or abstract. The team recommends selecting a style and medium that corresponds with the aesthetic and atmosphere of your gathering.

Beyond the Samples

When hiring a live painter, it is vital to examine their portfolio and verify their experience. Have they painted at events before? Can they work quickly under the pressure of a live function? Do they have testimonials from previous patrons? The team suggests requesting to view examples of their live event work, not just their studio work.

Logistics and Setup

A live artist needs a certain amount of space, light, and time to work. Communicate Your Vision|The Brief|What You Want

Do you have a preferred hue scheme? Are there any elements you certainly wish included or excluded? The more clearly you convey your dream, the more probable the final artwork will meet your expectations.

Display the Painting|The Reveal|Beyond the Process

The painting is not merely a process to be observed. It is also a completed piece of art that is able to be displayed.
