Comprehending License Categories and Their Validity

In Hungary, driver's licenses are classified according to European Union requirements. Nevertheless, the credibility duration of the card itself-- in addition to the particular driving advantages it grants-- depends heavily on the driver's age and the vehicle category.

While the physical plastic card generally expires every 10 or 15 years for administrative reasons (such as updating the photograph and individual details), the underlying right to drive certain vehicles might alter much quicker, especially for older chauffeurs or those running heavy industrial vehicles.

Requirement Validity Periods by Age Group

Generally, the administrative credibility of a basic automobile (Category B) license depends on the holder's age at the time of issuance:

- Under 50 years of age: The license is generally legitimate for 10 years.
- Ages 50 to 60: Valid up until the chauffeur turns 60.
- Ages 60 to 70: Valid for 3 years.
- Over 70 years of age: Valid for 2 years.

For business and professional motorists (Categories C and D), the validity durations are considerably much shorter, needing much more frequent medical check-ups and renewals.
