

A planting conversation can begin with the appearance and use you want from a garden rather than a fixed list of plants. Explain the preferences you already have and leave suitability questions open for assessment.

Describe what you like

Use a few labelled examples to explain your preferences for the arrangement or character of planting. https://oscar-wiki.win/index.php/Backyard_Designers_Near_Me:_Crafting_Your_Outdoor_Oasis_36195 Identify existing plants you want considered for retention. Avoid treating a plant seen in another garden as automatically suitable for your own property.

Explain the care you expect

Discuss which gardening tasks you are prepared to arrange after installation. Keep a preference for a particular appearance separate from the amount of care you expect to provide. Ask how the proposed planting responds to both parts of the brief rather than relying on a broad label for easy maintenance.

Record selections and questions

Ask how proposed plants and any unresolved selections will be described in the proposal. Keep substitutions or later changes with the current plan. At handoff, request the agreed care information and identify which questions still need an answer for the planting being installed.

Prepare the next property discussion

Use this discussion guide alongside the notes for your own property. For “Keeping Planting Preferences Clear in a Project Brief”, identify the first question that needs an answer and record which part of the brief it affects. Keep that answer with the current proposal so the next conversation starts from the same description of the work.
