

The market for beginner violins in Singapore ranges from extremely cheap, poorly made instruments at one end to well-made, properly set-up student instruments at the other. LVL Music Academy firmly occupies the quality end of this spectrum, offering beginner violins that are genuinely playable from day one and that support rather than hinder the learning process. The difference between a cheap beginner violin and a quality entry-level instrument is not simply about materials or brand, but fundamentally about set-up. An instrument that has been set up by a skilled luthier, with check here the bridge correctly cut and fitted, the nut adjusted, the strings appropriate for the player's level, and the bow properly reaired, will be significantly easier to play than even a better-made instrument that has not been set up at all. At LVL, every beginner violin sold through the shop is set up by Alan Senejani before being offered to the customer. This means that families who purchase a beginner violin from LVL can be confident that their child is starting with an instrument that has been properly prepared for learning.
