How the Mines Game Works

In a normal Mines execution, the gamer starts by selecting a stake and the number of mines (usually between 1 and 10). The game displays a grid of covered cells-- typically 5 × 5 or 6 × 6. Each click reveals a cell:

- Safe cell-- The player receives a payment based upon a multiplier that increases with every successive safe choice.
- Mine cell-- The round ends instantly, and the entire stake is lost.

A lot of Mines video games likewise feature a Cash-Out button, permitting the gamer to secure the accumulated multiplier at any time before hitting a mine. This optional exit point is main to mines game the risk-reward dynamic, as gamers need to decide whether to continue for a larger reward or secure the existing win.

The multiplier structure varies by supplier, but a typical pattern is highlighted below:

Number of Mines Approximate Multiplier per Safe Cell * 11.05 × 31.25 × 51.55 × 72.00 × 103.50 ×

* Exact worths vary throughout software service providers; the above figures represent typical standard multipliers.

Due to the fact that the multiplier grows with each safe choice, the general go back to gamer (RTP) can surpass 96% when gamers squander at optimal minutes, although the high difference implies long-term RTP is often better to the base RTP published by the casino.
