Accessory Checklist For Stairlifts

Accessories You May Purchase For Your Stairlift ProductYou know how cars are always adorned by all sorts of accessories, right? Men go ga-ga over the bling-blings for their wheels, almost the same way women go crazy over belts, brooches and the K&K air duct services sorts. Well, for stairlifts, the primary purpose these accessories serve is safety and comfort and not design. Stairlifts may already be costly as they are, but it would still do you good to purchase accessories to ensure the well being of your loved ones.Frame type Sit And Stand If the stairlift product thats to be installed at your house would be used by more than one person, perhaps its better to purchase a sit and stand frame for your stairlifts, especially when neither have the same health problems. With this type of frame for your stairlifts, the user or passenger may be able to either sit or stand while he/she climbs up and down the stairs.Seatbelt Yes, just like when youre riding a roller coaster or your ordinary Ford truck, its always advisable to wear a seatbeltjust in case anything happens. You can choose between a seatbelt that would be wrapped around your lap the manufacturers describe it as an inertia reel lap harness or one that would strap both your shoulders this time, referred to as static type, 3 point fixing over shoulder harness. Either way, as long as you have a seatbelt for your stairlift, the chances of risking injury are less likely.Hinged Rail In a small or compact sized house where theres little space available, stairlifts with hinged rails are quite ideal because you could fold the lower part of the rail when its not in use. This is also ideal if your stairway is right next to the doorway and the lower part of the rail of the stairlift just serves as another obstruction.Power Folding Footrest Lets just say that you have a mighty big house and even with the dough rolling in nonstop, you still prefer to install stairlifts instead of an elevator, no matter that theres about twenty feet worth of stairs to climb up and down.Wouldnt it be nice for the passenger to have a footrest while theyre traveling from the East to the West Coast? But seriously though, the footrest for the stairlifts can also be handy for users or passengers who have problems bending down.Power Swivel Seat This is more for the comfort of passengers as they enter and exit the stairlifts.
