

You have waited patiently. And yet the reply-by date has come and gone, and several guests have still not replied.

Chasing with guests who have not RSVP'd is one of the uncomfortable aspects of party planning. But it is vital to make certain you have precise numbers for your event.

At Kollysphere, we have created 10 successful approaches to follow up with guests who have not responded.

First. Dispatch a Gentle Nudge

Send a welcoming nudge via email or messaging app. Maintain the atmosphere light and non-pressuring.

Second. Make a Personal Phone Call

A personal call is typically more productive than digital messaging.

3. Send a Text Message

A brief SMS is typically the speediest way to obtain a response.

Fourth. Reach Out via Social Media

If you are linked with the guest on social networks, a gentle DM can be productive.

5. Ask a Mutual Friend

Should you possess a mutual friend with the guest, ask them to gently prompt the guest birthday event organiser for adults in klang valley on your behalf.

6. Send a Second Reminder

If the maiden nudge goes unanswered, send a follow-up one a few days later.

Seventh. Establish a Hard Cut-Off

Kollysphere's specialists suggest establishing a last deadline and conveying it distinctly to all guests.

Eighth. Offer an Easy Way to Respond

Make it as simple as can be for guests to reply. Provide a direct link to an digital form.

Ninth. Show Empathy

Bear in mind that guests may have valid reasons for not replying promptly.

Tenth. Prepare for Non-Responses

At some point, you must have to establish a last limit and arrange in line with the answers you have received.
